

Hispanic Pre-Doctoral Economics
Pipeline Conference
Friday November 6, 2020

A one-day virtual workshop to connect promising undergraduates from around the United States with pre-doctoral hiring institutions.

Please help identify promising Hispanic undergraduates who are interested in PhDs in economics and related fields. Pre-doctoral fellowships are increasingly becoming a route for undergraduates to learn the ins and outs of research, develop their own interests in economics research, and boost preparation for graduate school.

Students who attend will have the opportunity to meet with economists, pre-doc managers, current pre-docs, and graduate admissions directors from the participating institutions.

The Participating Institutions include:

Brookings Institution	Texas A&M
Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago	University of California at Berkeley
J-PAL	University of Chicago
Princeton	University of Michigan
Stanford	Yale

with a keynote address by Juan Carlos Suárez Serrato (Duke)

How to Apply:

In order to foster a workshop environment with significant interaction, we will limit the number of attendees.

Due Date: Monday October 5 at 5pm PT

Eligibility: Current or recent undergraduate or Masters students from a U.S. institution

Please submit the following in PDF format to ashepipeline@gmail.com

- a 1-2 paragraph description of why you want to attend, what you seek to learn, and what are your research interests
- an unofficial copy of your transcript
- the name, job title and email address of two academic references

If you have any questions, please send an email to the address above.

This conference is sponsored by the Texas A&M Economics Department in cooperation with the American Society of Hispanic Economists.
